About Us

The Society for Integrative and Comparative Biology (SICB) is one of the largest and most prestigious professional associations of its kind. Formed in 1902, as the American Society of Zoologists, its mission remains to further research, education, and public understanding of living organisms from molecules and cells to ecology and evolution. SICB encourages interdisciplinary cooperative research that integrates across levels of biological organization and can move beyond standard model organisms and methodologies to enhance research and education. SICB also promotes use of new technologies that allow researchers to improve their abilities to collect and properly analyze these new and complex data sets.

The Society is dedicated to promoting the pursuit and public dissemination of important information relating to biology. Research is presented in numerous symposia during the SICB Annual Meeting, as well as in the publication of its journal, Integrative and Comparative Biology, which is one of the most cited and highly-respected journals in the field of biology. The Society also works to inform the public, legislators, and granting agencies of the importance of organismal biology and its potential to produce valuable new knowledge, findings, applications, and tools.

SICB believes students bring an exciting new perspective and excitement into the field of science and therefore works to enhance biology education and scholarship at all levels, from K-12 to postgraduate. There are several programs aimed at supporting student attendance at the SICB annual meeting and for supporting student research. The SICB Research and Education Resources provide peer-reviewed instructional materials, resources, and activities in integrative and comparative biology for faculty at colleges and universities.

SESSIONS

SYMPOSIA

SOCIAL EVENTS

The Annual Meeting of the Society for Integrative and Comparative Biology is an educational and research forum for investigations of biology on a broad comparative scale. More than 2,000 scientists, researchers, administrators, educators, students, and policy makers attend, traveling from all over the world to learn and participate. The meeting includes many symposia, poster sessions, special programs and workshops, as well as hundreds of contributed papers in divisional and topical sessions. Each day ends with a keynote lecture followed by events for socializing.

The 2017 SICB Annual Meeting will run from 4-8 January 2017 in New Orleans, Louisiana. The opening evening plenary presentation will be given by Dr. Billie Swalla, Professor of Biology at the University of Washington, Director of the Friday Harbor Laboratories, and Past President of SICB. Dr. Swalla's research focuses on the evolution of chordates and the chordate body plan, integrating approaches from evolutionary and developmental biology, ecology, and genomics. She has been a strong advocate for integrative and comparative organismal biology throughout her career. Her talk will serve as an exciting start to the meeting and is followed by a welcome reception for all attendees, sponsors, and exhibitors.

Location

New Orleans, Louisiana, one of America's most culturally and historically-rich destinations, will be the host of our 2017 annual meeting. A melting pot of French, African, and American cultures, New Orleans is known for its centuries-old architecture, vibrant nightlife and music scene, and flavorful cuisine.

Hosting the 2017 SICB annual meeting in New Orleans has considerable historical significance for the Society. In 2009, SICB took New Orleans out of consideration for annual meetings because of the Louisiana Science Education Act of 2008, which approved the teaching of creationism and other non-scientific alternatives to evolution in the state's public school science classrooms. A letter was sent from SICB President, Richard Satterlie, to Governor Bobby Jindal in 2009 indicating that, in opposition to these policies, SICB would not hold future meetings in New Orleans. Subsequent actions taken by the New Orleans City Council in 2011 and the Orleans Parish School Board in 2012 prohibited the teaching of creationism or intelligent design in science classes. Following these actions, SICB lifted its ban on meeting in New Orleans, and the 2017 meeting will be the first SICB meeting in this popular conference destination since these events.

While you're in town for the 2017 SICB Annual Meeting, we encourage you to make time to visit a jazz bar, take in the elegant scenery of the Garden District, explore the rich history in the French Quarter, or enjoy the supernatural side of the city by going on a ghost tour.
